Question - Explain the concept of diarchy as introduced in the G.O.I Act 1919, highlighting its main features & the rationale behind dividing subjects into "reserved" & "transferred" categories.

Diarchy - system of dual executive in provinces whereby the ~~executive~~ power was divided into "transferred" and "reserved" subjects.

Excellent identification of reserved and transferred subjects that clearly shows the power division under diarchy.

Good definition of diarchy. Consider adding brief historical context of Montagu-Chelmsford Reforms that led to the 1919 Act.

Your diagram correctly shows division of subjects but includes Princely States incorrectly. Diarchy was implemented only in British Indian provinces.

Main features of Diarchy

- ① The members having power over "reserved subjects" were appointed by British crown.
- ② The Governor selected the elected members from the respective provincial ~~council~~ for handling the "transferred subjects" which were basically the welfare functions and held the Indian ministers accountable to provincial legislative council.
- ③ In case of failure of constitutional machinery in provinces, the governor could even legislate over transferred subjects.

Moreover, the reserved subjects formed the pillars of colonial power as → (Rationale).

Law & Order → Coercion.

Finance → Control of expenditure.

~~Administration~~ of Justice → Legal authority.

Revenue → Income

Legislation → Enhancing the income earned.

Tough the official reason behind diarchy was administrative efficiency but the real reason was to ensure Imperial authority with the "Carrot & stick" approach for Indian leaders.
