Question - Discuss Gandhi's experiences in South Africa and how they shaped his principles and strategies for the Indian independence movement. How did the concept of Satyagrah emerge from these experiences? When Gandhi landed in South Africa in 1893, he was an inexperienced barrister, seeking legal career, but when he returned to India in 1915, he evolved into a mass leader armed with moral and political weapons of Satyagrah, Ahimsa and civil resistance which later pivoted the Indian National Movement.

Gandhi's experiences in South Africa -

- ① When Gandhi reached South Africa to defend his client - Dada Abdullah, he witnessed racial discrimination faced by various types of indentured labourers
- Indentured labourers from South India working in sugar plantations.
  - Memon muslims from Gujarat (Kathiawar) who immigrated in early 1890s.
  - Ex-indentured labourers staying in South Africa after the expiry of contract (usually 5 years).

Relevant intro: good transformation arc.

② Apart from the racial discrimination faced by Indian diaspora in South Africa, Gandhi himself faced racial acts in various scenarios -

a) Turban incident in Durban - where Gandhi refused to remove his Turban and gained attention for violating prevailing norms.

b) Train incident at Pietermaritzburg - Gandhi was travelling from Pretoria to Johannesburg in a first class AC coach where he was forcibly thrown from the compartment and he spent the night in a waiting room of Maritzburg station.

c) Johannesburg incident - he was denied accommodation in any hotels as he was termed as "Cedie" by the so called whites. It was a term used for indentured labour from India.

These incidents marked the beginning of Gandhi's fight against racial discrimination through the principles of Ahimsa.

The Rise of Gandhi

① Created Natal Indian Congress (1894) to bring the Indian community in South Africa together to fight for equal rights as British subjects.

Question- If Champaran was the first successful application of Gandhian politics in India, South Africa was the place where the principles forged. Gandhi's philosophy of Satyagraha, Ahimsa, mass movements did not merely make him the face of Indian Nationalism but a statesman who transformed Ahimsa as a "moral ideal" into powerful instruments of "political action".
